Customer Reviews

"This book is an essential addition to the professional development collections of school library media practitioners, and it would ideally also land on the desks of school administrators who can support school librarians in their efforts to lead and collaborate with colleagues in inquiry-based CCSS implementation. This book is also a highly recommended addition to academic libraries, especially in institutions that support school library media and other teacher education programs." -

Violet H. Harada is professor emeritus in the Library and Information Science Program at the University of Hawaii at Manoa. Sharon Coatney is senior acquisitions editor for Libraries Unlimited, past president of the American Association of School Librarians, and former councilor-at-large of the American Library Association.

This collection of articles covers the purpose, challenges, and benefits of inquiry in the classroom and PLC. It also addresses inquiry process models and practical applications of the models.
